ALLISON ZUCKERMAN

Known for colliding colorful pop imagery with art-historical references, Allison Zuckerman stages a playful roast of the male-dominated Western canon, blending homage with critique. Her paintings and sculptures recast familiar figures and motifs through a contemporary feminist lens, revealing a deep affection for the male-authored works she challenges. Zuckerman’s visual vocabulary moves freely between art history and mass culture, bringing figures drawn from childhood nostalgia and popular animation into conversation with Picasso’s fractured bodies, Rubens’s voluptuous figures, Cézanne’s apples, Warhol’s flowers, and Lichtenstein’s lemons. Magnified pixels punctuate her compositions, referencing screen technology and the pixel as the smallest unit of the contemporary mark: a digital counterpart to the Ben-Day dot. These painted squares both construct and obscure the image, drawing attention to the arbitrary nature of censorship and the decisions that determine what is made visible and what remains concealed.

Allison Zuckerman (b. 1990, Philadelphia, PA) lives and works in Brooklyn, NY. Zuckerman recently curated “HINENI: An Exhibition About Resilience and Presence” in collaboration with A Hug from the Art World at Ezra Gallery in Sag Harbor. Earlier in 2026, she delivered a TEDx talk at the University of Pennsylvania and received the Mark Podwal Visual Art Award from the Elie Wiesel Foundation. In 2017, she was an artist-in-residence at the Rubell Museum in Miami, where she developed a solo exhibition for the institution. Current and recent solo exhibitions include Remixed and Reclaimed, a retrospective presented at the University of Pennsylvania with works on loan from the Neumann Family Collection (2026–27); the Arlington Museum of Art, Arlington, Texas (2024); König Galerie, Berlin (2024); Kravets/Wehby Gallery, New York (2024); and the Rubell Museum, Washington, D.C. (2023). Her work is held in numerous collections, including those of the Brooklyn Museum, New York; Museo Nacional Thyssen-Bornemisza, Madrid; the Akron Art Museum, Akron, Ohio; and the Jewish Museum of Australia, Melbourne. Her collaborations include projects with Veuve Clicquot, Tod’s, Charli XCX, ELLE USA, and Vogue Italia.

KELLI VANCE

Kelli Vance's female subjects command authority and agency, while the compositions unravel into explorations of sexuality, identity, and control. Each chosen object carries layers of symbolism: pears recalling the feminine form celebrated in Renaissance art; cheese and fruits a nod to memento mori; cherry pie evoking sexual metaphor and contradiction through its sweet yet tart nature. Luxurious foods, textiles, and accessories invite indulgence, yet the women who wield them disrupt any straightforward pleasure, imbuing each scene with ambiguity and latent threat. Through these carefully layered references, Kelli Vance crafts images that embody the femme fatale: alluring, dangerous, and ultimately defiant.

Vance (b.1983) presented her first solo exhibition The Velvet Trap at DIMIN in 2025. Her work was recently acquired by The Mack Art Foundation (MAF), and the Elie Khouri Art Foundation (EKAF); and is in the permanent collection of the Anderson Museum of Contemporary Art, Roswell, New Mexico, and Houston Airports, city of Houston. Vance received an Individual Artist Grant from Houston Arts Alliance and the City of Houston and was included in the 2009 Texas Biennial. She was a finalist for the Hunting Art Prize and was a Roswell Artist-in-Residence in Roswell, New Mexico. Kelli Vance graduated from the University of Houston with her MFA in Studio Art in 2008.

MICHELLE IM

Michelle Im (b. 1984, Atlanta, GA) creates ceramic objects that explore themes of home, displacement, and cultural identity in the context of globalization. Through the lens of traditional Korean ceramics, Im examines the impact of historical and cultural forces on her Korean American identity. Most recently Im's work centers around ideas of labor. Im's last solo exhibition presented nine 4-foot tall ceramic flight attendants highlighting both her experience in the service industry and her frequent trips on Korean Air. The newest body of work, to be premiered at The Armory Show, continues the ideas of labor and was made during her residency at the John Michael Kohler Arts Center.

Im's most recent solo exhibition "Hello, Goodbye" at DIMIN was reviewed by Hyperallergic, Ceramics Now, Cultbytes, and Impulse. She was included in the "Brooklyn Artists Exhibition" at the Brooklyn Museum (2024-2025) and featured in The New York Times' exhibition review. She was a prestigious resident of the 2026 Arts/Industry program with the John Michael Kohler Arts Center (JMKAC). She was a 2024 Artist Fellow at the Museum of Arts & Design (MAD) in New York. She was an award recipient of the Center for Craft Teaching Artist Cohort (2023), an American Craft Council Emerging Artist Cohort (2022), and a Ceramics Monthly Emerging Artist (2022). Other residencies and fellowships include Township10 (2024), Watershed Center for the Ceramic Arts (Guest Artist, 2023), Penland School of Craft (Distinguished Fellow, 2023), and Archie Bray Foundation for the Ceramic Arts (Visiting Artist, 2022). Im holds a BA in Biological Sciences & Art from the State University of New York at Buffalo and is a faculty member at Greenwich House Pottery in New York City.

BRENNEN STEINES

Brennen Steines utilizes chance-based processes to create abstract paintings reminiscent of landscapes. Layers of oil, limestone, and metal are added to the painting substrate, creating a geological sedimentation of pigment on the surface, not dissimilar to dried riverbeds. Emulsive solutions are then applied to the surface of the paintings and evaporate into forms that recall micro and macrocosmic terrains. The shimmering traces of pigment resemble tidal pools, industrial surfaces, geologic formations, and cellular topographies.

Steines (b. 1993, Rockford, IL) is currently based in New Haven, CT. Steines has preseted two solo exhibitions at DIMIN, As Above, So Below (2026), and Dispersion Field (2023). He received an MFA from Yale School of Art in 2022, attended the Saas-Fee Summer Institute of Art in 2022, and received a BFA with an Honors College degree from University of Wisconsin–Milwaukee in 2018. Steines was a Yale University CCAM Blended Reality Studio Fellow and attended the Yale Norfolk School of Art through the Ellen Battell Stoeckel fellowship (2017). His work has been exhibited at DIMIN, New York, NY; Chilli Art Projects, London, UK; Museum of Wisconsin Art; West Bend, WI; Jeffrey Deitch, New York, NY; Green Hall Gallery, New Haven, CT; The Alice Wilds, Milwaukee, WI; Usable Space, Milwaukee, WI; and Galerie Kenilworth, Milwaukee, WI.

TAJ POSCÉ

Steeped in personal and universal histories, Taj Poscé's complex work is built by burning and collaging archival elements, construction materials, and paint. The combination of materials and the physical act of destruction imbues the work with a spirit found throughout natural history, aligning with universal laws and forces reflected by the ethereal motifs he employs. Poscé focuses on moments that crystalize the beauty and vulnerability of Black life, asking what it means to carry weight of the past spiritually, while simultaneously straddling a state of chaos thinking of the future.

Poscé (b. 1995, Philadelphia, PA) is based in Baltimore, MD. His second solo exhibition with DIMIN "Looking Up From Here" is currently on view through October 24th. Poscé's "Cosmic Shift" (2026) was recently acquired by the Studio Museum in Harlem after his inclusion in the newest "F" series exhibition "Fade". Last year he was awarded a residency at the Last Resort Artist Retreat (T.L.R.A.R.) founded by acclaimed artist Derrick Adams. In 2024, Poscé presented his first solo exhibition "Just on the Other Side" with DIMIN, which was reviewed in Artforum. Poscé recently finished his MFA at the Maryland Institute College of Arts (MICA) receiving the highest merit scholarship, the Leroy Hoffberger painting program, and the Congressional Black Caucus Visual Artist Award. He holds a BFA from the Tyler School of Arts (Philadelphia, PA) where he studied under Odili Donald Odita and received numerous awards including the Yale Norfolk Summer Residency, and a studio abroad in Rome, Italy with Italian-American papermaker Roberto Mannino.

STEPHEN THORPE

Stephen Thorpe paints interiors, where rooms are likened to the psychological interiors of the mind. Drawing on psychoanalysis, sociology, folklore, and the reality of myth, Thorpe's intricately composed paintings are at once representational and abstract, deliberately rendered to represent the dualities, synergies, and contradictions of relation between environment and human interiority. Such nuances are present in all aspects of the work – from his painterly process, with visceral and physical applications of paint paired with contemplative, controlled marks; to the chosen subject matter, encompassing busy patterns, half-familiar objects, and skewed perspectives juxtaposed with quiet, gradients of color.

Born in Margate, England but raised in Aberdeen, Scotland, Stephen Thorpe studied painting at the Royal College of Art in London and was a Professor of Painting at Savannah College of Art and Design (SCAD) in Hong Kong and Atlanta, GA before relocating to New York and then California. Thorpe's recent solo exhibitions include "Half in Love with Oblivion" at DIMIN in New York (2026); "The Last Word Always Belongs to the Mountain" at Ora Ora in Hong Kong (2025); and "Dream House" at DIMIN (2024) which was named a "Must-See" by Artsy and Art Net. Thorpe has participated in group exhibitions around the world at venues including Saatchi Gallery, London; the National Museum, Gdansk, Poland; Copeland Gallery, London; Summerhall, Edinburgh; the Royal Scottish Academy, Edinburgh; and Aberdeen Art Gallery, Aberdeen. His work has been featured in The New Yorker, The Art Newspaper, Widewalls, Art Net News, Artnews, Hyperallergic, Surface Magazine, and Lifestyle Asia, among others.
